The group meets for breakfast at 6:30 a.m. at Stormy & Mo's Café on Highway 92, in Hereford.

During breakfast, participants will receive maps and checklists. Breakfast will be free for RCCBC participants.

Army Concert volunteers

The search is on for soldier-technicians with any type of electrical or theatrical experience in lighting, audio and video equipment. Also needed are drivers with an 88M — a motor transport operator occupational specialty or commercial drivers license.

Soldiers selected for the six-month assignment at the Army Entertainment Detachment will get real-world experience in staging live concerts as they tour the country and work with top musical artists.

Soldiers accepted for the 2003 Army Concert Tour crew report to Fort Belvoir, Va., in late March to begin specialized training.

They'll learn all the necessary production skills they'll need, such as how to construct a 36-foot high truss roof, build the 40 by 60-foot stage, install and operate professional audio and video systems, and operate stage lighting.

Soccer added to Commander's Cup program

By Sgt. Jessica Inigo
Time Out Editor

Company C, 304th Military Intelligence Battalion paved the way to make the post Commander's Cup program all the more challenging by winning the first two-day soccer tournament Saturday and Sunday.

The tournament marked the first of much more to follow, as soccer will officially be part of the program in 2003.

In order to have a sport added to the Commander's Cup program proper justification is needed, according to Michelle Kimsey, sports specialist.

Kimsey said 14 unit teams signing up for a two-day tournament is justification enough.

"Having soccer become part of the Commander's Cup program is great," said Jarrod Moreland, Company C, 304th MI Bn. coach. "For a long time people have been wanting soccer to be part of the program, but nothing was done to make it happen. It's obvious it's a sport people like, with all the teams coming out."

All 14 teams battled it out in round robin fashion between Bujalski Field and Geronimo Field until the top teams met up for championship double elimination games Sunday. Company C, 304th MI Bn. beat out Company B, 305th MI Bn. Team 1 with a score of 3-1 to take the top place in the soccer tournament. Both teams were awarded trophies.

"Charlie, 304th deserved to win. They're a good team with a lot of skill. They brought out the most talent," said Randle Weaver, Company B, 305th Team 1 defense.

Though Company B, 305th MI Bn. Team 1 came in second, they said they were proud of themselves.

"We played seven games in two days — four today — back-to-back. That takes a lot of endurance. We played the most games out here, so we're most definitely proud of our achievement. It was a great first tournament," said Jeremy Michael Fry, Company B, 305th MI Bn. Team 1 defense.

William Benning, fullback for the Non-commissioned Officers Academy, said having soccer part of the Commander's Cup program is important. "It's another outlet. Some soldiers only know soccer from playing it in high school and college. Many may not like the other sports, like basketball or softball. Having many sporting events helps keep soldiers fit and out of trouble," Benning said.

Christina Guthrie, Headquarters Company, 306th MI Bn. right full back agrees, but said there is more to soccer than fitness. "It's a lot of fun, helps units build esprit de corps, plus more women are interested in playing it than football," she said.

Look for upcoming soccer games in next year's Commander's Cup program.

Historic Homes open doors for Holiday Tour

By Sgt. Jessica Inigo
Time Out Editor

Local community members flocked to view treasures from afar nestled within the Old West during the annual Holiday Tour of Historic Homes Sunday from 2-5 p.m.

Every elegant turn-of-the-century dwelling located in the historic area on Grierson opened its doors to the public to help bring the community closer to the post commanders, while adding some Christmas spirit.

The old post, a national historic landmark, remains as it was several decades ago. The houses open for the tour are the original homes of adobe and stucco built at the turn of the century. Senior military officers now occupy these homes.

Each home featured is named after a historic figure who played a valuable role in the development of the Army and Fort Huachuca, such as General of the Armies John J. Pershing, and the Indian Wars leader and one time commander of the Department of Arizona, Gen. George Crook.

Santa, carolers and the 36th Army Band filled the air with the

Each house held artifacts from various locations the families have visited throughout the world, including various pieces from Egypt, England, Germany, Japan, Korea, Mexico and even antiques from Camp Huachuca.

Guests were greeted by each family and guided throughout the various rooms in each house.

Many rooms were thematic and had servicemembers waiting to explain to guests the history of the house and family.

Airman Basic Adam Michael Johnston, a mores code operator course student, volunteered his time to the tour by caroling from house to house.

"I enjoy singing, so I had a good time," Johnston said. "I also got the chance to go into almost all of the homes. They were really nice. The tour is a good way to better know these officers and see how they live."

Homes on the tour were Morrow House, Sanford House, Macomb House, Winans House, Wilder House, Miles House, Pershing House, Crook House, Bernard House, Carr House, Cruse House and Carleton House.

'Off the chain' workshop inspires young writers

By Sgt. Jessica Inigo
Time Out Editor

The gym at Smith Middle School sounded more like a concert than an athletic room Monday as children were dancing, swinging their arms in their seats, and singing along with Erik Cork, a nationally recognized writing consultant.

He brought his Rap, Rhythm, and Rhyme: Rebuilding the Writing Foundation workshop to Fort Huachuca to not only encourage the children to get up and have some fun, but also teach the fundamentals of writing through song.

Cork taught sixth-, seventh- and eighth-graders writing confidence with music, movement and audience participation. Then he visited Myer Elementary School Tuesday to hype up the fourth- and fifth-graders.

"We were kind of making fun it before he came because we thought it would be stupid," said Ashley Nichole Lewis, 13, eight-grade student. "It was actually pretty fun. He came to us at our level, not at a little kid level."

His high-energy innovative workshop empowered them to organize their thoughts, then transfer them effectively to paper, according to Jacqueline Wilson-Bradley, eight-grade language arts teacher at Smith Middle School.

"Wow. It was excellent. Students were moving, writing, and whether they realize it or not they wrote the entire time. Plus, it actually goes along what is already being taught" Wilson-Bradley said.

Rock n' roll

Cochise College's Introduction to Geology class took a field trip to Lyle Canyon outside the West Gate Saturday to learn about local rocks and the surrounding environment. Left: Dr. Jan Rasmussen, Geology instructor, tests a rock area with acid to see if limestone is present. Rasmussen also found various examples of igneous and sedimentary rocks in the area. Students discussed findings and searched grounds for unusual pieces. Above: Sandy Kunzer, a geologist, explained how the area came to being with various floods and deposits left behind from them. The creek bed and the surrounding area contains deposits dated back millions of years ago.

Students also sketched a mountain with various deposits in the sand, including iron, which gave the sand a red tint, and an area called the Fort Critenden, which gave the sand a gray tint.
